

Dr. Kristian Spilling is a senior scientist at the Finnish Environment Institute (SYKE). His background is from working with algal physiology and ecology, and he has for the past 8 years been involved in various projects dealing with biofuel production using algae as a feedstock and with bioremediation of wastewater and CO₂ capture using algae.